Editorial

During the year 1920-21 there has been much to do, and there are times when we feel that some of the tasks must go unfinished. It is hard to decide what is most important. As our minds go back over past years we feel very grateful for the years spent in the Seminary. They were happy years, the most of them full of joys, a few sorrows which must go along with life, and, of course, the work which means much to us now. There are girls from East to West, North to South, whose hearts are full of love for the Seminary. Today we are calling on the girls from far and near to give their support to the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnae Association. So amid the busy days, spare just a few hours for the Association—time enough to find a new member, time enough to speak a word to a prospective student, and time enough to send in your dues.

Let's work together and show our love and loyalty to our Alma Mater.

Annual Meeting

The Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnae Association held its annual business meeting Friday, May 27, 1921, in the Girls' Parlor of the Seminary.

The president, Mrs. Annie Cobb-Toms presided. The meeting was opened by a prayer by Mrs. Annie Hotchkiss-Howison.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary, Mrs. Janet Stephenson-Roller, and accepted.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

It gives me much pleasure to be here with you this morning. I want to thank each one of you for the great honor you have bestowed on me in making me your president. I appreciate it very much, and I shall do all in my power to carry on the work of the Association.

During the year I have sent out 300 circular letters to the Alumnae and I am glad to report that there have been a good number of members added to the Association.

I sent out letters several times to the Chapter Heads, and at all times, I received very enthusiastic replies.

As the year's work has been hampered by the incorrect lists of the Alumnae, I have taken it as the task for the officers of the Association to put them in correct order.

Your President needs your support and your co-operation; she is depending on you to help her make the coming year a great and glorious one for the Association.

Respectfully submitted,

ANNIE COBB-TOMS.

The vice-president reported a meeting of the executive committee held in preparation for the business meeting. The corresponding secretary reported the number of letters written. Both reports were accepted.

Following is the treasurer's report which was accepted:

Reports from the Atlanta and Washington chapters were read and accepted.

The publication committee reported 650 copies of the 1920 Bulletin printed.

Miss Elizabeth Bell, chairman of the Missionary Scholarship Committee, gave the following interesting report, which was accepted:

REPORT OF THE MISSIONARY SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE OF THE MARY BALDWIN SEMINARY ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION

The Missionary Scholarship Committee is thankful to report that this—the second year of its existence—has been a successful one. The contributions have not been as large this year as last, due, probably to the prevailing financial conditions, but almost as many individuals have contributed, and from Connecticut to Nebraska and from Illinois to Texas have come letters filled with commendation of the enterprise as a fitting memorial to Miss Baldwin.

In March, a letter telling of the Scholarship and appealing for funds was sent to all members of the Alumnae Association and to all other Alumnae who could be reached and the chairman has written forty-two personal letters. Earlier in the year an appeal was made to the organized chapters. The Staunton Chapter, largely due to the efforts of Miss McChesney of the committee, again leads with $143.00. Atlanta has sent $68.50, New York $50.00, and Washington $33.00.

A letter in the interest of the Scholarship Fund was sent to church papers by Mrs. Annie Hotchkiss-Howison and aroused much interest among Alumnae who had been out of touch with the Seminary for many years. A number of new memberships and life memberships in the Alumnae Association have been turned in by the Committee.

We wish that all the Alumnae might read the letters that have been received by the Missionary Scholarship Committee. They have been most interesting, showing so clearly how noble a character was Miss Baldwin's, and how deep was the impress of it upon those with whom she came in contact. The response from Alumnae of more recent years has also been noteworthy, since it shows that her principles are still taught in the Seminary.

As announced in the Bulletin last year, Virginia Alby Bull, daughter of Mrs. Libby Alby-Bull, an honor graduate of the class of 1888 and a missionary in Korea, was chosen as the Alumnae Association's first Missionary Scholarship pupil. She entered the Seminary in September 1920. The Committee has kept closely in touch with her and with her work throughout the year and believes that she will prove a credit to the Association. Two of our most interested Alumnae, who, as members of the faculty, were closely associated with Virginia, recommended that she be given the Scholarship another year. The Missionary Scholarship Committee meeting with the Executive Committee, acted favorably upon this recommendation, so Virginia Bull will return in September to undertake her second year's work.

The following extract from a letter from Mrs. Libby Alby-Bull will be of interest:

"Perhaps never in this world will you understand how the scholarship came to us just at a critical time. My one prayer is that, when our dear children are educated, we may be able to pay back in God's own time and way, all that is done for us now. The education of children is the hard problem for missionaries. Mr. Bull and I have had many problems to face but this has been the only one which it seemed we could not solve. So we felt as if the scholarship had come directly from our Heavenly Father."

The following letter of appreciation has been received by the Committee:

M. B. S., Staunton, Va., May 26, 1921.

Dear Miss Bell:—

Through you I wish to extend to the Alumnae Association my utmost appreciation and thanks for the scholarship which I have held during this year and also for the privilege of holding it for the coming year.

This year has been a year of great help to me in many ways and I feel that I owe it all to the Alumnae Association which has been so generous in the scholarship. It is most impossible to express my true feelings and gratitude for all that has been done and is being done for me.

I beg to remain yours most thankfully,

VIRGINIA BULL.

Respectfully submitted,

THE MISSIONARY SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE,

Elizabeth A. Bell, Chairman and Treasurer.

In answer to the New York Chapter report in which several changes were suggested, Miss Latane of the Seminary Faculty, gave the following talk showing that a number of the changes had already been made and the impracticability of the others.

(It was moved and seconded that a copy of Miss Latane's reply be sent to the New York Chapter and also printed in the Bulletin.)

Madam President and Members of the Alumnae Association:

In appearing before you I am embarrassed by recollections of alumnae meetings at my own Alma Mater. I remember only too well certain feelings towards the newer members of the faculty—people that have sprung up since the good old golden days, the new people who presume to stand in (I do not say fill) the places of the dear old teachers and friends. We resented their notion that things had been rather primitive in our time, and we were rather sceptical of the modern improvements. But when we became better acquainted with these newcomers, realized their ambitions and their labors for our Alma Mater, and heard their plans and their problems, we felt as if we had been regarding our Alma Mater as a sainted memory while they saw her marching on in lusty life.

And so I beg your kind indulgence toward me as a representative of the present faculty. My seven years in the school cover the last two years of Miss Weimar's administration and the five years under Miss Higgins. Before Miss Higgins had completed her first year as principal, the nation went to war. War, with its unrest, its excitement, its abnormality, even its epidemics of disease, found its way into the schools and brought new difficulties and new dangers. We would like you to keep this in mind when you estimate the achievement of the last five years.

You have just heard the report of the New York Chapter and the suggestions it offered for improving the school. Let us take up these suggestions one by one, so that we may clearly see where we stand, you of the alumnae and we of the faculty. We want your constructive criticism and your suggestions, but we also want you to have exact knowledge of what is going on here, and if we should sometime differ from you in opinion, we would like you to know why we dissent.

The first suggestion then, is for "enlarged grounds." Amen and amen, echo the faculty. It is a serious matter. I believe that Miss Higgins rarely ever walks up the Green Hill or New Street without breaking the tenth commandment and coveting her neighbor's house or lot for the Seminary. How can such good men as our trustees refrain from buying those lots and saving us from the sin of covetousness!

"More athletics for the girls." Again we say amen. But do you realize how much has been achieved in the recent years? Do you recall that in 1919 Miss Higgins succeeded in dividing the old Department of Expression and Physical Training, and acquired a Physical Director to devote her whole time and strength to developing athletics? Did you read in last year's Alumnae Bulletin that a new event at commencement was the awarding of cups in tennis, baseball, basket-ball, and hockey? Do you know about the athletic association, whose membership comprises most of the student body, and which demands a strict standard of scholarship and character for all the members of the various teams? Did you ever see our hikers go out on a Saturday morning, sixty strong, to walk five or ten miles, have dinner in the country, and get home in the late afternoon, tired and happy? It is incredible now, but literally true, that on this campus six or seven years ago basket-ball was looked upon as rather rough, school cheers as unladylike, and bloomers were never seen outside of the gymnasium. We are still shockingly conservative, however. We do like bloomers and stockings to meet in public!

"Athletic contests with other schools." We are not so sure of our ground here, for we plunge into a tremendous controversy that is agitating the educational world. Colleges and schools famous for athletics say that a few students are overtrained, to the detriment of both body and mind, while the others suffer for lack of the training and zest that athletics give. Many of the wise ones say that the intercollegiate and interscholastic games are the difficulty—Everything is sacrificed for the teams which represent the institution outside, the time and strain of such contests seriously hamper the scholastic work of the competitors, while the money for the teams is taken from funds needed for the general athletic development. We hear that many good schools are beginning to discard interscholastic games. There is a rumor that our neighbor, the Staunton Military Academy, has recently announced its decision to give them up for next year. Why should we adopt a policy that leading schools have found unsatisfactory and are discarding? But we believe with all our hearts that girls need athletics for their moral as well as for their physical training. We want our girls to be good sports, good winners and good losers, to love life, to love fair play, and games help this.

Our Athletic Association has a device for getting “pep” into games. In the fall all the members are divided into two classes for the year, whites and yellows, and they are rivals for the year. Instead of one team playing outsiders, we have two teams who play each other, and so each game includes twice as many of our girls.

“Greater freedom and more fun for the girls.” Freedom, that is a word to conjure with. But freedom to do what? I honestly think that the feeling of restraint among our girls is keenest at two points—there are two delights that are characteristic of American youth and only scantily permitted to our young charges—running the streets and going to the movies. Many parents tell us that at home they do not want their daughters to do all the things that “all the girls” do, and yet it is hard to be forever restraining them and saying no. As a friend of mine put it, “The girl rebels after a while and does what she pleases, or else she becomes a perfect stick and never wants to do anything.” Some parents bring their children here hoping that they will be happy in the companionship of other girls and be sheltered from the very things from which their parents find it hard to protect them at home. There it is! We are honestly old-fashioned, but we think we have a mission to the elect. More fun! That is another matter. To my mind the greatest improvement that has come to the school in the last years has been one that it is difficult to appreciate without residence among us, a difference of spirit. It is the increased happiness and contentment of the girls, and their greater loyalty to their school. How has it come about? Not by accident, I assure you. The administration has faced the needs of the girls and tried to meet them, the need of physical exercise, which we have mentioned before, the need of play, of social life, of organized activities. Seven years ago there were three organizations for the girls, the Y. W. C. A., and the Senior and Junior Literary Societies. We now boast ten such. This means ten sets of officers who get some training in the conduct of meetings and business and many, many committees in which other girls are trained to some efficiency and responsibility. We found a tendency to overwork the girl of proven efficiency and to overlook the shy one who needed bringing out. So at Miss Higgins' succession the faculty made a ruling that scatters offices and brings a greater number of girls into play. For social life we have parties galore, from the Y. W. C. A. party to the new girls just after school opens, to birthday parties at Miss Trout's. In May we had a succession of picnics, gay afternoons in Highland Park, if you please. As I remarked, we are not habitues of the movies, but we go to them now and then and to the theatre when there is something especially good. We really have broken past records. During the war the Mary Baldwin Seminary walked in a body in three patriotic parades through the streets of Staunton! Of course the war has brought to us, as it has to all the world, a new notion of giving. We have had our drives for many, many causes. These have been occasions of new interest and deeper than selfish joys.

The next suggestion is an alluring one, "Occasional dances at which properly introduced young men should be allowed to come two or three times a year." We, the faculty, do not go to many dances, but if half is true of what we read in newspapers and if what you ladies at large in the world tell us about present day dances, they present serious problems to many mothers. Is it really necessary to add this whole set of problems to those we already have? Two hundred daughters of other people, whose previous training we did not control—two hundred young men for us to feel responsible for introducing properly! If these girls belonged to us all the year, we would feel more responsibility about introducing young men. But when the parents have three summer months and the Christmas holidays for such social activities, we think it safer to leave this matter to them. Some strange and cruel parents tell us that they send their daughters here to keep them from going into company too young! Our primary object is to educate these girls, and we do not feel that we have proper facilities for bringing them out socially. And you will admit that we are honest. It is so stated in the catalogue! But suppose that after all, you could persuade Miss Higgins to change this policy of the school. She could not do so without the consent of the trustees. So it might be best for you to begin on them at once.

Next "the restoration of the honor system." This has puzzled me. So far as I can learn, the only thing of this kind that has been dropped was a custom of calling the roll each day and having each girl report what rule or rules she had broken. I have repeatedly heard alumnae refer to this, but always as a joke. They said that naughty girls did not report and so formed the habit of untruth, while poor little overconscientious souls suffered agony for fear they had failed to report some infringement of a rule. I cannot think that any one seriously wishes to reinstate this custom. The term honor system is sometimes used with reference to examinations alone, the examinations being conducted with no teacher present and the pledge signed at the end of the paper. Is it wise to give girls as young as some of ours a responsibility that is suitable for college students? We are most concerned with honor itself than with any one system of developing it, and I am happy to say that I think our class-rooms have as high a standard of honor as have those of any school. In the examinations just over I left my class-room for a half hour at a time whenever I wished to do so, and I had not the slightest fear that any girl would take advantage of my absence. Probably, however, the term honor system was used to cover what is more often called student government. That may mean anything, either real student government as it exists in colleges for women, or all the shades of cooperative government in which faculty and students work together. This school has always had faculty government, and for various reasons we think it best to retain that for the present. The idea in cooperative or student government is to develop in the student a sense of responsibility and to train in discriminating between right and wrong—in other words to have her act from motives within rather than from rules outside. With this aim we are in perfect sympathy and we are constantly working towards it. Last year a measure of self-government was tried successfully in one dormitory. This spring it has been given to all the dormitories. There is much less talk of rules than there used to be, and less friction over them. For instance, in the dining-room the teacher at each table used to record the latenesses of her girls, and as some teachers were strict and others lenient, there was frequent complaint of injustice. A very simple device has done away with all that. The door is closed when grace is said, and any girl who enters later signs up for herself as she enters. Very few have occasion to sign up. We are feeling our way quietly, and as I said before, we are more concerned about the thing than about its name.

Now we come to academic matters, “a straight college preparatory course, with two years of college work.” When Miss Higgins came to the Seminary as a teacher thirteen years ago, her work was English and she found that department in an unsettled state. There was plenty of good work going on in the various departments, but none of the courses were planned to meet exactly the entrance requirements of the colleges. Miss Higgins with Miss Weimar's sanction, reorganized the English department and made the four years of High School English fall into line with the requirements of the colleges and therefore correspond with the courses in the best preparatory schools. It was a fine piece of constructive work with great results. The other departments followed and got themselves into line. Eight years ago, five years after Miss Higgins came to the school, Wellesley College, Mount Holyoke and Goucher gave us the certificate privilege, that is, they agreed to admit our students without examination. Later Vassar and Smith did the same. Four of those colleges have withdrawn the certificate privilege from all preparatory schools and admit by examination only Goucher still gives us the certificate privilege. So when we are asked to provide a "straight college preparatory course," we reply that we had had it for eight years. Now as to two years of college work, we offer three. Junior colleges are supposed to offer work suitable for only the Freshman and Sophomore years of college, and all our collegiate work is of that grade. The Seminary had always required three years of advanced work for graduation in the academic course, and when we received our Junior college rank from the State Board of Education in 1915, we did not wish to diminish the amount of work for graduation. So we required three years of work in our Junior college, more courses than other Junior colleges require, but all of them of the Junior college grade. In a school like this it is impossible to make the collegiate courses correspond, course for course, to the Freshman and Sophomore courses of a college of the first rank. We have not their facilities and we have to receive graduates from High Schools that would not be accredited by the big northern colleges. But our work is getting a recognition that is encouraging. There is another test of our work that seems very significant. Miss Higgins this spring appointed a classification committee of three to interview each student who will return in the fall, to help her to arrange her course. The committee was astonished to find what a number of the girls want to go to college. It takes good work to rouse intellectual ambition.

Permit me to make the last quotation from the suggestions "the entering student to be known as freshman, upper classes to be known as sophomores, juniors and seniors; that girls, not taking the regular course be known as 'special students'; and that the title of seniors should belong only to the graduating class of the college preparatory course, others graduating in special departments, such as music or art, be known as senior specials." Frankly we do not understand this. If we use the terms Freshman, Sophomore, Junior and Senior for our college preparatory or High School course, what is left for the Junior college classes? We, in common with most private schools, use the terms First year, Second year, Third year and Fourth year for our college preparatory department. The English schools and some in this country prefer to say First, Second, Third and Fourth Forms. We might do that. But we would rather not take the names distinctive of college classes and use them for the preparatory department. We use the term Senior for those who are graduating in the Literary Department—(i. e. the Junior college), or in any special department, and on the commencement program and in the catalogue the department is carefully specified. If you look at the list of graduates in any catalogue for the last five years, you will see them carefully differentiated into three groups, Collegiate, Preparatory, and Specials. Here again we have been asked to make a distinction that we have been making for the last five years.

I thank you most cordially for the opportunity of stating some facts and some feelings from the faculty point of view. If I have wearied you, my excuse is my love for the old Seminary, my loyalty to the head under whose guidance it is my happiness to serve, and my eagerness to win your sympathy for our endeavors.

MRS MINNIE LEE PRICE-NEWMAN

On April 5, 1921, Minnie Lee Price-Newman died at her home in Charlotte, N. C., after a very brief illness. Her sudden death came as a personal shock to her many relatives and friends.

She was a student at the Seminary during the session of 1908-09. Up until her death she was a loyal alumna and was always deeply interested in the school itself. Those who knew her personally will never forget her cheerful temperament as well as the cordial word and genial smiles which she extended towards all. Her life was one of sweetness and gentleness, of faithful service as a devoted wife and mother, and above all, of service to her Master.

Written by Nina Price.

MRS. MARY YOUNG-EARMAN

On December 10, 1920, after many months of patient suffering, Mrs. Mary Earman, (nee Young) a former beloved student of M. B. S., passed from our midst to her eternal reward.

Mrs. Earman was a woman of sweet personal charm, leaving the impress of her gentle nature upon all with whom she came in contact.

In her beautiful, unselfish life, we have exemplified the joy of christian service, and though unable to carry the great message of redeeming love to those perishing in a foreign land, as she once longed to do, she nevertheless labored with untiring devotion, at home, in the Master's vineyard, being for years a faithful helper in the Sabbath school at Olivet Church, and at the Third Presbyterian Church of this city.

Truly, the influence of this sweet woman will live forever in the hearts of all who knew and loved her.

MRS. LILLIE RIPLEY-HENDERSON

Lillie E. Ripley came to the Seminary in 1871, leaving in the class of 1874.

She was a striking Diana-like figure with her unusual height, vivid blue eyes, radiant bloom and brave spirit of cheerfulness, while the dimples which came with her smiles added a human touch to her stately appearance.

She was frank, friendly, happy, courteous, and much liked and well remembered as a friend, student and musician. It was a pleasure to meet her all the years of her life.

Lillie was born in Atlanta, Georgia, on February 16, 1856, and was married there on December 20, 1876 to Col. Dan. S. Henderson, a prominent lawyer of Aiken, South Carolina, and they lived in happiness more than forty-years. She died on February 17, 1921, at the University Hospital of Augusta, Georgia, peacefully, after a short illness.

She was buried at Aiken, a great concourse honoring her memory. Her pastor said of her: A great soul, a woman of queenly virtues, of sterling character, of strong conviction of right activity, with a most sympathetic spirit—a woman whose hand of helpfulness was always extended to others. Her home was her palace—her husband her strength and support—her sons her joy and delight.”

A member of the patriotic societies, she did a great work during the World War, perhaps to the physical injury.

Besides her husband she left three sons, Finley, Dan. S. Jr., Ripley and numerous grandchildren. Her aged mother and five sisters and brothers survive her.

Life gave Lillie love, luxury, and happiness and from her great heart she poured forth kindness and aid along the pathway.

The class of 1874 is proud to carry Lillie Ripley-Henderson upon its roll, and may we follow her example of unselfishness and service.

Written by Nellie Hotchkiss Holmes, class of 1874.

These memorial were accepted by rising.

Under the head of “New Business” the question was asked; and discussed, if the Missionary Scholarship fund will be made permanent. A motion was made and seconded that the money left, after the expenses of the year had been paid, should be invested as a basis of a permanent fund.

Methods of arousing the interests of former M. B. S. girls were discussed.

A motion was made and carried that the president appoint a secretary for each class and that the class lists should be revised and re-typed. The class lists were placed in the Seminary Library during Commencement and many corrections were made by the visiting alumnae.

A motion was made to add an amendment to Article VI of the Constitution and By-Laws of the Association increasing the annual dues from fifty cents to one dollar. The initiation fee shall remain one dollar and yearly dues shall be one dollar. A notice of this motion shall appear in the 1921 Bulletin, to be acted upon at the business meeting, May 1922.

The Staunton Chapter announced that all visiting alumnae and graduates would be the chapter's guests that afternoon on an automobile drive, coming by A. M. A. for special "dress parade."

Mrs. Sallie Hamilton-McCormick was asked to take charge of the memorial services to be held at Miss Baldwin's grave Sunday afternoon.

All members and guests were asked to meet at eight o'clock in the Seminary parlors to attend the Alumnae banquet.

There being no further business, the president declared the meeting adjourned.

Alumnæ Banquet

On Friday evening, May 27th, a banquet was held in the Seminary dining-room which was artistically decorated in the school colors, white and yellow, and mountain laurel.

The guests were met in the parlor by Miss Higgins, Mrs. Toms, Mrs. Roller.

The guests were the members of the Association, members of reunion classes, Faculty, Trustees, Seniors, Juniors, and members of the Senior Domestic Science class.

Mrs. Toms acted as toastmistress, her first toast being one to Miss Weimar:—

Tonight as we are gathered here there is one afar whose heart is with us. For the best years of her life were spent in the Seminary. Shall we not drink a toast to Miss Ella C. Weimar, and send her a telegram from the table:—"We miss you tonight, and we are wishing for you much happiness."

Miss Weimar sent the following telegram in reply:

"Appreciation of remembrance and good wishes. Am thinking of you." E. C. Weimar.

To Miss Higgins, Faculty and Friends:—Our hearts are very glad tonight as we Baldwin girls gather together again to pay homage to our Alma Mater. It gives me much pleasure that so many of you could be here to see the wonderful work that has been going on in the Seminary. To Miss Higgins, our friend and Principal, we offer our congratulations. Let us drink to her success and happiness.

To the members of the Faculty who have so ably assisted her, we offer our sincere thanks. Let us raise our glasses and drink to the splendid faculty of the Seminary.

Welcome by Miss Higgins:

Madam President, Members of the Alumnae Association of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, Members of the Reunion Classes, the Board of Trustees, and Visitors:

It gives me great pleasure to extend to you a cordial welcome to the Mary Baldwin Seminary. Two full years have passed since I enjoyed this privilege, years that have seen changes and development in your beloved Alma Mater, but we have remained unchanged in our love and affection for the Alumnae and our pride in their achievements. To you we look for sympathy, support and loyalty, and in you we expect to find reflected the lofty ambitions and high ideals for which the Mary Baldwin Seminary has stood so firmly for over three-quarters of a century. The Mary Baldwin spirit is embodied in you, and by you are we gauged and measured. Each member of the Alumnae is very dear to us, but I greet my own class of 1914 with particular joy. You are my very own, and I have watched you with pride and pleasure. Your Alma Mater which has watched over and guarded the interests of so many generations of students has been especially mindful of you.

We have the juniors and seniors with us tonight. The juniors I hope to greet a year from now, and the seniors will come to us as members of the Alumnae Association. My heart is very tender to you, my Seniors, with your dainty little dresses and funny little puffs on the outside of your heads and the romantic ideas within, but I have no fears for you, for the brain meter registers fine marks and high standards to your credit. May you follow the gleam and become loyal daughters of the Mary Baldwin Seminary and worthy peers of those who in former years have passed out through your stately columns. The winsome little maiden will become the strong, fine, gracious woman representing the highest type of christian womanhood, ready to do her part in the world. We must pause to pay loving tribute to one of your number whose fair and radiant face is not with us, and whose spirit has passed so recently to the "great beyond."

To the Board of Trustees who for the past five years have honored me with their confidence and turned a willing ear to my requests, to the members of the Faculty who by their efficiency, loyalty, and ability have contributed so generously to the success of that period, to one and all, I open wide the doors of the Mary Baldwin, hoping you will find good cheer and comfort, and assuring you that my courteous, efficient, and honored friend and colleague, Mr. King, who in the language of scores and scores of his youthful admirers continues to be "perfectly wonderful" unites with me in extending a most gracious and cordial welcome to every member of the Seminary family.

Mrs. Lizzie Wilson-Timberlake gave the following toast to Mr. King:

Madam President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Perhaps you have all heard the story of the old colored preacher who, having been deposed from his church, and feeling much aggrieved thereby, went to his Bishop and argued his case thus: "Don't I read de Scripture and splanify the meaning?" "You duz," answered the Bishop. "Don't I argify and sptefy?" said the old man. "Yes, Brudder, you argifies, an' you sputefies, but you doan give de wharfore." To avoid the mistake of the old colored brother, I am going to begin with my wharfore. There is, in our Faculty, a certain member, who, for 30 years past has gone in and out before us, performing his duties quietly, cheerfully, efficiently; one who at all times has worked with zeal and enthusiasm for the best interests of the Mary Baldwin, one who amid the perplexities and worries incident to a business life, has always been courteous and kind, giving a cheery word, a pleasant smile or a hearty hand-clasp to those with whom he came in contact, one who, though perhaps a tiny bit partial to the auburn-haired girl has proved a sympathetic friend in the joys and sorrows of all, therefore I feel that I shall strike a responsive chord in the heart of every Seminary girl, be she old or new, when I propose a toast of long life and happiness to our friend Mr. W. W. King.

RESPONSE FOR FACULTY

On a May morning exactly one quarter of a century ago I was enrolled for the first time among the graduates of the Mary Baldwin Seminary. That graduation day is still one of the fragrant pages in my Book of Life. I remember the flowers, the light, the music, dear, familiar faces on the rostrum and in the audience of those I loved long since and have lost awhile. I remember the pain of parting from these halls which had been my happy hunting-ground for eleven long and fruitful years, and the eager hopes and roseate dreams with which I looked forward down the vista of the days that were to come.

Some details I have forgotten, but of one thing I am certain. I know that by the wildest stretch of my imagination I did not picture myself standing as a faculty member on a May day twenty-five years in the future before the assembled alumnae and their guests to welcome them back to our beloved Alma Mater. On this, as on so many other fearsome occasions since my return two years ago, I almost question my own identity. Again and again there has floated through my mind tonight the classic and familiar line: "Is this I, or is it not I?"

It has been good to come back to the Seminary—to find the air still sweet with memories of that past which we old girls love to cherish, and alight at times with what seems the living presence of the noble men, the gracious women, and the long generations of charming girls who laid the sure foundations of her greatness and are today her proudest heritage. But there have been changes too—a great expansion on the material side, which has given us a group of buildings which is a refining influence in the lives of our students and a potent factor in their aesthetic education. Even more significant has been the development in the intellectual life of the school. If requirements for graduation today be compared with those of twenty-five years ago, it will be recognized that there has been a general and marked elevation of standards. This is shown in the greatly increased size of the faculty, the equipment of the classrooms and laboratories, the growth of the library, the greater comprehensiveness and variety of the courses offered, and the many other ways in which the quality of the work has been strengthened and broadened. More is done, too, than ever before to stimulate social life among the girls. During the past two years, for the first time in the history of the institution we have had a Physical Director and a General Athletic Association, and the increased interest in athletics, both in our gymnasium and on the Athletic Field,—where participation in the contests is permitted only to students who have maintained high rank in scholarship and deportment—has done much to promote a wholesome vigorous, happy life among the girls. The way in which the work of the Y. W. C. A. has developed is marvelous to me; for two years now it has numbered every student among its members, and its influence in the school as a vital, spiritual force has been, I believe, beyond measure. In the last five years the number of literary societies has increased from three to eight, each with a large and enthusiastic membership, and all developing in the girls initiative, poise, and powers of leadership, and preparing them, in ways undreamed of in my day, for the broader spheres of influence into which woman has now entered, and for efficient service not only in the home but in the community and the state.

Did time permit, I should love to tell you of the splendid faculty I found gathered here, and of the girls—the same sweet, fresh, radiant company that thronged these halls in your day and in mine; but I am sure that no one of us here tonight would be loath to recognize that for the large achievement of these later years the most generous praise is due to Mr. King, our Business Manager, who with fine loyalty and devotion has watched over the material interests of the school, and to our Principal, Miss Higgins, who has labored so untiringly, and so efficiently to promote high standards of scholarship and discipline, and in whom every wise effort for the social development of the students and the advancement of their intellectual life has found its source or its support. Here's wishing to them both and to our school many more years of rich and happy service!

NANCY WITHERSPOON MCFARLAND,

TO THE REUNION CLASSES

To you of the reunion years, we give a most hearty welcome. Many of you have come afar to prove your love for the Seminary. It is one thing to say we love and another to prove it.

May the years be kind to you and bring you all happiness, and may your love and admiration for the Seminary bring you and your friends back to many reunions.

Response for 1890—written by Mrs. Mary Heneberger-Herring, read by Miss Augusta Bumgardner.

The class of '90, tho scattered far and looking back through many many changes to the old days at "the Seminary," is none the less loyal to the memory of its Alma Mater, and the spirits of all the old girls are present in this reunion wherever their bodies may be.

We send our love and all high hopes for Mary Baldwin and for all the girls who are to go out from her into this wonderful modern world for women where "Life's adventure swings afar.

Beyond tomorrow, like a star!"

MARY B. H. HERRING,
Sanford, Florida.

Miss Sadie Meetze sent a telegram of greetings to the class of 1890.

Response for 1891—Mrs. Sue Stribling-Snodgrass:

A GLANCE BACKWARD AND FORWARD

I feel as if I really ought to be introduced to the younger generation before me tonight—so I shall just tell you that I am Roselle Mercier Montgomery's roommate—and so I am now famous in the reflected glory of her name as a poet—Years ago, with far more of exaggeration than truth, she used to say she was only known as Sue Stribling's roommate,—and now the tables are turned and I hope some day to gain a name for myself as the writer of "Reminiscences of Roselle by a Roommate." I shall now make a determined effort to be a Mark Tapley, for memories crowd so thick and fast, it is hard to keep the tears away. Mark Tapley's philosophy ("Some credit in being jolly") was instilled in all of Miss Wright's pupils by precept and example. I want to confess right here before you all to precious "Miss Nannie" what our beloved, unique Miss Wright and I did when we came back here last—ten years ago. Some imps of mischief must have prompted the former head of the English Department (and the brainiest woman I have ever known) to suggest that we "skip church" Sunday night and then without turning on a light anywhere, through the silent corridors, we groped our giggling way—she the gray-haired teacher, I the former pupil like kids playing "hookey,"—through one music-room after another up the back way to the old chapel, where for so many years Miss Wright had reigned supreme, (I suppose there are regular English class-rooms now) and there in the dim shadowy light, we evoked the ghosts of the past; and she told in her inimitable way jokes on everybody—even on the revered Miss Baldwin,—just little peculiarities that were funny but in no way detracting—I'll never forget it, for that was our last laugh together; the next year brought the news of Miss Wright's passing away amid strangers in the island of Jamaica.

My last memory of Miss Strickler is just as dear and just as characteristic. Shs, Roselle, and I had a wonderful reunion here ten years ago, when we laughed over many a scene in her class-room when she the stern Latin teacher looked down over her eye-glasses at the squirming agonizing Roselle, punching Sue vigorously and beseeching her not to read so far. Roselle never translated but half the lesson and we know now how perfectly Miss Strickler saw through it all as she, with mild sarcasm would remark, "Roselle, not quite so much originality, please."

No one would be more delighted than Miss Strickler to see the poems of her former pupil published far and wide, and what pride she would take in telling that Roselle is Vice-President for Connecticut of the League of American Penwomen!

Extracts from Mrs. Montgomery's letter to Mrs. Snodgrass:

"You know I am sorry to miss this chance to pay a tribute to Miss Strickler's memory. Every day I value more and more what she taught me. I find the exactness which she exacted of us, in translating for example, of the greatest possible help in writing verse—it helps to stick at it and not be satisfied with anything but what seem to me the right work. And I have so much use now for the mythology we learned and it helps so to be really familiar with the Latin classics! As you know, I have had no real training in versification, but I find her training in composition invaluable in attempting to write verse. She, it was, who taught me the value of a well-thought-out and carefully constructed plan, even in sentences, and I am almost conscious of her critical but inspiring guidance in building the skeleton of each-pome." And one thing upon which I have been congratulated.—the building of climaxes,—driving the point home in the last line, was a direct gift from her. Really I don't believe a working day goes by without some conscious, definite memory of her—and I consider that a great tribute to a teacher after thirty years.

There are lots more things I would like to say if I came too—of Miss Wright whose enthusiams, (Mrs. M. had no classes under Miss W.) I think I remember most vividly now, for Greek sculpture, for the "King Arthur" statue, for the painting of Velasquez which are all associated in my mind with her. Dearest of all to me, however, after thirty years, are the old friendships which are still dearest, best, and most unfailing.

Riverside, Conn.

May 21, 1921.

But these reminiscences, delightful as they are to us, are boring to you of later years with memories just as delightful of your own school days. So I will pass on to the second part of this rambling effort—a glance forward.

Some years ago a movement was launched in the Alumnae Association to change this old school system to a "Class A" college and a questionnaire was sent out far and wide. There was a decided interest taken and the majority of answers from the Alumnae favored the change to a regular college curriculum which I who sent out the questionnaire strongly advocated then. But if Henry James is right in saying "Education is a point of view," I am now educated—at any rate I've changed my point of view on this subject. With deeper experience and fuller knowledge of present day conditions and needs, I am firmly convinced that there is as wide a field of usefulness for this school to continue as it was begun, specializing in the great fundamentals of a good education, bringing out individual talents and strengthening the charm of personality while moulding the spiritual and moral character of the student. In the larger colleges the personal contact and influence of teacher and pupil is impossible. Just think how much poorer our lives would be without these beautiful memories that we all have of our dear old teachers here! And it is my own experience that no college graduate I've ever known has as splendid a training in Latin or English. Unless they might major in Latin, what college "A. B." has read the plays of Plautus, Juvenal's Satires, Virgil's Eclogues and Georgics-Horace's Epistles or anything but a few Odes of Horace, a few books of Livy, Virgil's Aeneid, and Cicero's Orations? What college "A. B." has studied Anglo-Saxon and Historical English Grammar, and who but a "Ph. D." has worked up with such careful analysis a Shakespearian Drama, noting the Development of the Passive Interest the interweaving of main and secondary plot, Poetic Irony and Foreshadowing, the familiarity with Scripture, the obsolete words and so on, all translated and recorded as if for publication? If some of our modern college professors could see some of Miss Wright's, Miss Riddle's or Miss Strickler's pupils' notebooks, they would open their eyes in amazement!

I remember one letter urging the school not to change, "not to lose that old world, mignonette aroma!"

I laughed over the fanciful phrase then but I now agree with the thought that was in the mind of the writer. There is an atmosphere indescribable intangible but unmistakable that surrounds this place, giving those who have lived in it and breathed it a something that distinguishes them throughout life. A Mary Baldwin girl, whether in a Governor's Mansion, an Ambassador's or Senator's wife, a missionary, nurse, Red Cross worker or Sunday School teacher—whatever her social, political, religious or domestic activity in later life—bears an unmistakable stamp—a hall-mark so to speak—which is far more desirable to us who have girls of our own than the average type of college graduate. My own daughter with a will of her own as most modern girls have, took "the bit in her own mouth" and insisted on college after her High School course. Typhoid fever and the World War cut her course to a two year one which makes her education and her mother's very similar in kind but (pardon the egotism which I am only using to illustrate my point of emphasizing the superiority of our M. B. S. faculty)—her Latin course, tho' she had five years, was far inferior to ours, her English College courses in which she specialized, did not cover anything like as wide ground, while her two years of College French were almost a farce. And yet we didn't consider our funny old fat "Mam'selle" with her "Girls, you murst do dis"—"You murst not do 'dat in any way, shape, manner, or form!"—her invariable answer when asked about such and such a grammatical form—we didn't consider her one of our best teachers! Yet of late years I have read French with a John Hopkins Ph. D. and wasn't of a bit ashamed of my knowledge or accent!

So in closing I beg of you who now bear the responsibility of keeping up the name and fame of this old Southern school to uphold the standard of the past, without being tied down to tradition or method, to keep alive those ideals that the wise founders of this school saw were the highest and so, in the future as in the past, to wield an unmeasurable influence over future generations of southern womanhood!

SUE STRIBLING-SNODGRASS, '91.

Response for 1911—Reba Andrews-Arnold.

Mdam President, Fellow Alumnae and Guests:

Ten years ago, when as a graduate I listened to the responses at the Alumnae banquet, I was thrilled and immediately possessed with the desire to be called upon some day to answer for my class, the class of 1911. I have found that Shakespeare in his great knowledge of human nature had a glimpse of me down through the ages, for I too can say, "All things that are, are with more spirit chased than enjoyed." And this is really a very trying moment.

But I am happy to bring you greetings, but compelled to confess to you that I believe I was chosen for this honor, not by selective draft, but by exhaustive draft. But it is a pleasure, for at least I can thank this organization for the scholarship so generously conferred upon me, and thereby thank you for any success which may have been mine.

My work, as a teacher, was in a co-educational school, a school which is achieving much in moulding the present generation of West Virginia. Nevertheless I never was and am not now a devotee of the co-educational method; and my daily contact with my own little girls teaches me even more clearly than my experience as an undergraduate, ten years ago, that the Seminary is the typical school and the ideal training for young girls.

Many changes are here, and many of the loved teachers have gone onto their glorious and worthy reward. We who have come back after years of absence miss those noble selfsacrificing instructors who shaped our characters and stamped us with their personalities.

But time has dealt gently with the Seminary and many old friends remain, who together with the fine new faculty make happy our return. And too it gladdens our hearts to know that the girls of 1921, as well as those of 1911 have had the privilege of studying under such efficient and painstaking instruction.

I wish I might bring you a new idea, but instead I come with a plea for the girls of West Virginia, the state of my adoption. When they come to you, do not receive them as strangers but as children of the daughter state of the Old Dominion, and return them to us imbued with the characteristics of this institution so plainly in evidence in the expression and the demeanor of those graduates.

And you dainty graduates, when we of sterner years tell you that girls are not as they use to be, do not believe it or think that we believe it; for girls were and are, and ever more will be the sweetest creatures in this old world yesterday, today, and tomorrow. And we of 1911 hope that you of 1921 will still consider us girls.

Response 1912.—Kate Earle Terrell said a few words in behalf of the class, which had chosen its patron, Dr. A. M. Fraser, to give the response.

Madam Toastmistress:

I flattered myself that I had very adroitly escaped the responsibility of making this speech on behalf of the Class of 1912. But it just shows how completely the women have turned the tables upon the men. The time was when men were supposed to put everything upon the women. But here with a large representation of perfectly capable women of the Class of 1912, they make the only man in the class sponsor for them all. I can only undertake to emulate the graceful tact of the women by which they transmute responsibilities into privileges. As a matter of fact, I am really very proud to be selected as the spokesman for such a class at this reunion.

The coming back of alumni is some times attended with amusing embarrassments. When Woodrow Wilson was President, he once attended a celebration of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence in Charlotte, North Carolina. Taking advantage of being so near to Davidson College, where he had once been a student, he drove out to the college to spend a few hours visiting the old scenes. He announced that he wished to go to the room that he had occupied when he was a student. He went in advance of the party attending him, as he walked down the dark corridor to the familiar old room. He went unannounced. When he rapped at the door a voice from within said, "Come in." He did not enter but rapped again. The voice answered a little impatiently, "Come in." Still he did not enter, but rapped the third time. The voice of the student within said, "Come in. Who are you any how?" He replied, "I am Woodrow Wilson." The boy within answered, "You have nothing on me. I am Christopher Columbus." Just then Mr. Wilson opened the door, and when the student saw his face, which no one could fail to recognize, he fled through the window, taking the sash with him. Of course, there are no such alarming incidents connected with the return of ladies to their Alma Mater. Mr. Wilson's peculiar style of beauty doubtless had something to do with the scare of the young man. When ladies go back to the rooms of the seminary, which they formerly occupied, their appearance will have the effect, not of an apparition but of a lovely vision.

It would not be safe for me to tell you just how vain I am of the class I represent. If I were to tell you, in the simplest and most modest words, of the superiorities of the members of my Class, you would all be green with envy. (I observe that you did not applaud that statement as you have done the others I have made). The members of my class are upholding the distinction of the Seminary in a number of states—Virginia, Illinois, Ohio, South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi. Five of them have entered the state of matrimony, and they believe that is the best of all.

I am a member of three classes and I am wearing to-night the insignia of all three. This button in the lapel of my coat is the button of the Davidson College Class of 1876. The colors, that I am wearing, are the colors of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Class of 1912, of which I have the distinction of being the patron. I also graduated in the Class of 1880 in Columbia Theological Seminary. And I wear the marks of that Class, but I venture to say that you cannot tell what they are. Some years ago, I was in Columbia, South Carolina, and passed a venerable old colored woman on the street, who spoke to me very deferentially. After I had passed, she called to me, "Mister, you're a preacher, ain't you?" Only twice before in my life had I been taken for a preacher by a stranger, and in both instances, the persons who took me for a minister were intoxicated. When I came to find out why this old woman had suspected that I was a minister, I was not very much more flattered than I was in the other cases. When I confessed to her that I was a minister, she said, "I thought so, Sir. You got the clothes mark." She had not discovered anything in my countenance or my bearing to indicate my profession, but it was only my Prince Albert suit. However, as a member of each of these three classes and especially in behalf of this Class of 1912, I greet you.

Response for the Class of 1913.

We, the seven members of the Class of 1913 send greetings to our Alma Mater and to her friends assembled at this happy time.

According to all tradition, we should have been unlucky, but to the best of my knowledge, the passing of the years has only proved again the fallacy of the old superstition. At any rate we all secured our diplomas without mishap.

This is our first reunion. The last time we sat as a class at the alumnae banquet table we were seniors. M. B. S. was very near and dear to us then, but who can say she is not now? The passing of the years has only served to increase our affection for her, and make her memory more precious.

And so, dear Alma Mater, "while the streams shall pour their bright waters into the sea; while the shadows shall flit about the hollows of the hills; while the heavens shall support the stars, always shall thy name, thy honor, thy glory be dear to us, whatsoever land shall call us hence."

1914 response.

Madam President, Guests of the Alumnae Association, Fellow Alumnae:

The Class of 1914 deeply appreciates the toast just given it and regrets that more of its number are not present to acknowledge it, since we feel that the reunion is peculiarly ours. We are a very scattered class and 'tis difficult for us to get together. Two of our Academic graduates are doing a glorious work for the Master in China and the rest of us are scattered to the four corners of our country. Some of us are married and some are not. However, since a letter from one of our classmates told me that four of 1914's class had been married twice—I suppose for that reason the rest of us have a good excuse.

We are particularly glad to have our class reunion with our sister class, 1912. Theirs was the first organized class and they did much to help us on our way. However, we inaugurated the first Sophomore-Senior banquet and the first Junior-Senior banquet. We are very proud of our class, of the achievements of our classmates at school and abroad. But most of all are we proud of our patron. Away back in 1912 we wanted some one to guide and direct our class activities; someone to whom we could go with our trials and our pleasures and we chose with a wisdom beyond our years. Our love for her and our pride in her has grown and increased year by year and because of her an added interest in the Seminary will always be ours. May we drink a toast to the honored patron of the class of 1914, the Principal of the Mary Baldwin Seminary—Miss Higgins.

ELIZABETH BELL, '14.

Virginia Switzer gave the response for 1915.

Madame President, Alumnae, and Guests:

The class of 1915 brings you greetings across the space of six short years. It seems only yesterday that we were "the" graduating class, and we felt that although we were the youngest members of the association, we were the most important. But then—I suppose every class feels that, until disillusionment comes.

I think the sweetest memory of the class of 1915 is of our beloved Patron and friends, Miss Martha D. Riddle. If we live to be ninety years old we will never forget the moonlight night, when under the trees, she drank with us in our loving-cup service. I can see her now standing there in the circle, the moonlight just touching up her beautiful hair, the bit of old lace at her throat, and that wonderful face. Mary Baldwin girls who have missed knowing Miss Riddle, have missed one of the rare gems to be acquired here.

"To know her was to love her," but far beyond that, to know her was to be a better woman in the future.

Perhaps our class has scattered, and most of us have not met again, still, each of us took with her an intangible something which links us ever closer and closer to our Alma Mater. A strange illusive something which makes us hold up our heads when Mary Baldwin is mentioned. You, class of 1921, will find it packed in some corner of your trunk when you reach home, and it, will never give you any peace until you return again.

Alumnae who are older than we, we are fast acquiring the experience of the world which you wear so gracefully, and we are striving to follow in your foot-steps. You have always set for us a noble and high example. May 1915 not fail you, but carry on the torch and in turn intrust it to the classes which come after her.

You, graduating class, join with us, help us, to "carry on," and in helping us, we may be able to help you. You have our dearest hopes and wishes that all that is best in life may be yours, and that if trials and disappointments come, you may be given strength to bear them.

Let us drink to that schools of schools,
 "Here's to the M. B. S."

1918—Given by Mary Lou Bell.

Madame President:

I am glad to acknowledge with appreciation the toast just given and also to extend to the other classes of this reunion—to the class of 1921—and to the guests of the Alumnae Association, greetings from my class—I am very sorry that so few of the members of my class could be here tonight for I should certainly have given to one of them the pleasure of responding to this toast. But of the graduates of 1918 only two of us are here—one having attained the honored position as a member of the faculty of her Alma Mater. We are also proud of our president who, two years after her graduation was admitted to the bar in the state of New Mexico as a full-pledged lawyer. But, unfortunately she had given up this opportunity for a successful career by embarking upon the seas of matrimony.

Since our own graduation day was such a short while ago, we hope to have the pleasure of many more reunions at M. B. S.

Response for Class of 1919.

1919 agrees with the old mountaineer who said that you can't know the joys of a single life until you have tried it.

We have thrown ourselves, most of us at least, so much into the joys and work of the single life, that no matter how much we all want to be with you tonight, and I assure you that that is a great deal, we have not been able to arrange it.

The memories of the banquet of 1919, when we secretly felt that it was all for us and that we were the most important people there are still strong with us. But our ideas have changed to this extent. I hate to say it before the class of 1921, that we feel that we still have a place in the Seminary. We are delighted to welcome them as Alumnae and we hope that they will meet us here in 1923 when we promise that we shall be so accustomed to the single life that we shall be able to arrange things so that we can all be present in the flesh.

We also send special greetings to the class of '20. They were with us on that night two years ago when we thought they were only Juniors and my! how far they had to go to attain our heights! And now they are surely beside us, if not ahead of us.

And greetings to Miss Hulburt who was not only our inspiration while we were in school but has also been our loyal friend ever since.

But it is not to these alone that we send greetings, but to each and every one present. We, scattered though we are, are each and everyone thinking of you tonight and wishing we all might be in your midst to renew old friendship and talk over old times.

JEAN B. FRASER.

Response for class of 1920 was written by Winifred Eisenberg and read by Isabelle McGowan.

Principal of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, Teachers, President and Members of Alumnae Association, our Honored Guests:

Each part of the engine is finished,
After months of tedious toil,
And now its united together
And made sound for leaving the soil.

But think of us as the flyers
And so eager to start, as they,
Our flight, that will cary us almost
To the stars in the milky way.

Our strict training here is the engine
 And the wings our teacher's advice
 Our true friendships here form the varnish
 And these should our needs suffice.

And some will go to the limit
 Their machines will fly straight and true,
 While some will fail in their journey,
 And fall from the heavenly blue.

We must wing our flight and it all depends,
 With what skill we guide each plane
 Thru the under current of ill-bent winds
 If our end be loss or gain.

And none save the Great Mechanic
 Can foretell what our end will be,
 We trust that He'll guide us safely
 Thru the gates of eternity.

These were our parting words last year, when we, the youngest class of Alumnae left our dear old M. B. S., to join the ranks of the loyal and true, who always hold their Alma Mater near to their hearts. Altho there has been only one short year since we left these mighty walls, for most of us, that one has been filled with experiences, strangely new and varied, but often times fascinating and full of charm. We have journeyed along widely diverging pathways, some of them quite distantly removed from the path that in former years led us straight to M B. S.

However we cannot forget her influence and as we travel toward the "stars in the milky way" we constantly remember that our Alma Mater depends upon us to uphold her honor wherever we may go. So dear Principal, teachers, most of whom we know, and Alumnae altho all of us could not be here tonight, we want you to know that our school girl memories of M. B. S. will burn so brightly in our thoughts, that we will ever seek to spread her fame and glory—to repay her for even the half she did for us.

To the Seniors:

We are very proud of you, our Seniors, as you go out to join that great band of Mary Baldwin girls. We are not giving you up—we are only sending you out ready to face Life's problems as true Baldwin girls.

May each of you have what is best in Life—Health, Wealth, and Happiness.

Response for the Seniors.

Madam President, Guests and Members of Alumnae Association:

I am glad to respond to this toast to the class of 1921, but, since my education for the last twelve years has been more in the three R's than in oratory, I feel quite unequal to the honor thrust upon me. For years the girls of our class have dreamed of the day when we should have finished our last examination at M. B. S. and be ready for our sheep-skins. We have also had visions of the time when we should have an invitation to the Alumnae Banquet and now our dreams and visions are coming true, and we can't tell you how glad we are to be here.

We have forgotten all the hard parts in the road to knowledge and are remembering only the joys. We should like to extend to Miss Latane our appreciation of her guidance through the mazes of History, Psychology, and Ethics, and hope that she return to her duties after the year's absence greatly benefited. To Miss Strauss also we would extend our appreciation, for she has been the very best of class patrons.

We feel that our invitation to be here tonight has added greatly to the dignity of our dignified estates as Seniors and we hope soon to join the roll of the Alumnae of the Mary Baldwin Seminary.

Hwai-an-fu, China,
February 28, 1921.

My Dear Friends:—

The China New Year holiday is just over, and "mid-term" examinations are going on in school now.

We are having an unusually warm spell for this time of year. One is tempted to believe spring is with us, but we know that cannot be: as our winters are long for the most part, and spring is late in coming where we live in China. This break, however temporary, is more than welcome. We long for the blooming flowers, and all the new foliage of spring; and its many other attractions.

Our school was closed for three weeks during the China New Year vacation. I spent the holiday in Soochow, a large city to the south of us, with my father. Soochow is one of China's oldest cities, and used to be one of the most fashionable centers of the country. Recently Shanghai has usurped her position. The leading silk and satin shops moved to Shanghai in order to secure the tourists' trade.

Soochow is only two hours by rail from Shanghai; so I ran down to Shanghai for several nights, and thoroughly enjoyed my visit there, in spite of an engagement with the dentist, and a rather extensive shopping list! My list included everything from a movable "baby organ" to matching silk thread! Also had a complete grocery list beginning right off with TWO CASES of "Carnation Cream!" When one makes a trip to Shanghai from the interior, he or she is the general shopping agent, as you can see, for the entire foreign population "up country."

China New Year's Day fell on the eighth of February

this year. I was in Soochow at that time. For about a month the Chinese all over the country take holiday, and have a good time generally. Whoever can possibly afford a new garment is seen in one on New Year's Day. Even the plainest of street children appear in bright colored jackets with bright artificial paper flowers in their hair. The ladies wear beautiful new silks and satins, lined with fur, and have expensive hair ornaments on their heads. While they display any amount of handsome jewelry.

The Chinese have a custom that with the end of the old year an end must be made of all old accounts and debts. Therefore "pay day" is the fashion the close of each year. It is not an uncommon sight to see a man, like Diogenes, carrying a lighted lantern in broad daylight on New Year's Day. This goes to say he has not settled his accounts with the old year, and carries the lantern pretending it is still New Year's eye! The idea is, I think, that it is bad luck to carry old debts into New Year—which is not such a bad idea. But with every custom in China is mingled superstition and here, as elsewhere, is the superstitious fear of evil spirits pursuing one.

This week is the one planned for the "famine drive" in our city. You have read of course, of the terrible famine in the north of China. Tens of thousands are facing starvation; and it is hard to see how they can escape in the months to come before harvest. Immense sums have contributed everywhere; and still there are more sufferers than supplies to be had. We are thinking of using the method of "tag day" at home in our inland city of 180,000. It will be innovation for Hwaianfu all right, and it remains to be seen how it will "work." Josey and I also hope to canvass the homes of the wealthy, with the other ladies here, and get each Chinese lady to contribute her share. So often then men in the homes gives a small sum for the house, instead of each wife, daughter, daughter-in-law, etc., (as the case may be) giving for herself as far as she is able. We are eager to make a success of this drive, and to give generously in our city.

Please let me hear from you whenever you find time to write.

With the best of good wishes as always,
Your sincere friend,
LILY U. WOOD.
